Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from What Poet and the Artist: And What They Can Do for Us The world is too much with us; late and soon, Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers: Little we see in Nature that is ours; We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon! This Sea that bares her bosom to the moon; The winds that will be howling at all hours, And are up-gathered now, like sleeping flowers; For this, for every thing, we are out of tune; It moves us not. - Great God! I d rather be A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn; So might I, standing on this pleasant lea, Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn; Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea; Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn. When we realize our want, perhaps we find our case is not so hopeless. Even if it is true that our circumstances are not to be changed, we ourselves may be changed. We cannot in actual truth travel to strange lands, multiply experiences and freshen our hearts with the friendships of men and women of other circumstances and other minds than our own. And yet in a way we can do all this far better than any personally-conducted tourist. There is a world of romance and beauty at hand to all of us, in which at any spare hour we may wander at will; a world in which we may form friendships with men and women of all ages and climes, the greatest souls that have ever lived on this earth. I mean the world of Art. Think of the lines in which...
